Learning By Doing

Have you found that in spite of your hard work, some students simply do not learn? It is becoming clear to educators across the country that with all the standards that are expected to be taught, combined with all the assessments that we give, not to mention all the other responsibilities of being a teacher that the only possible way we have of surviving and doing a good job is by collaborating with our colleagues in a meaningful way. Learning by Doing is the on-line book study for you. Educators who collaborate in teams using a PLC approach find this to be the most promising strategy for meeting the challenge of helping all students learn at high levels.
